REAct

Adaptation of the human rights organizations' work during COVID-19

Rights–Evidence–Action (REAct) – is an online system for documenting, monitoring and rapid reaction to violations of rights of key populations and people living with HIV.

Stay in touch with your clients:
- make regular calls and and online interviews
- organize a new crisis hotline or collaborate with existing public or non-governmental hot lines
- distribute to clients cards with information on emergency phone numbers in case of human rights violation

Provide information to clients:
- hand out brochures with verified information on COVID-19 precautionary measures and on human rights under quarantine
- information should be written in a language that is understandable to clients

Monitor the situation:
- new types of human rights violations may occur during quarantine
- clients may need new services and types of assistance

Take advantage:
- use this time to educate and increase the potential of clients / employees
- test new approaches (for example, outreach work online n the Tinder network)

Collaborate and share information with other NGOs and actors.
